A TIGHT CENSORSHIP

Premier Okada Shot Down; Blame Army Financial CurbsTOKYO, Feb. 26.—(INS)—Assassination of Premier Keisuke Okada, former Premier of Saito was confirmed in an official war ministry communique today—the first question of the military coup that was allowed to pass censorship.Fumio Goto, Minister of the Interior
in the present cabinet, was appointed acting premier by Emperor Hirohito.
Implying that the efforts of the soldiers to overthrow the government had failed after a day of bloodshed, the communique said: "At five o'clock this morning, a party of them staged a coup. First they attacked the government leaders at their residences."First, the residence of Premier Okada, who was immediately killed.
"Second, the private residence of Viscount Sato, Lord Privy Seal, who was immediately killed."By Dixie Hoste
I. N. S. Staff CorrespondentSHANGHAI, Feb. 26.—(INS)—A heavy death toll in furious street fighting in Tokyo, riots, incendiary, and assassination of the Japanese premier and half a dozen other leaders were reported through a tight censorship
today as imperial troops fought to disclose 3,000 mutineers from government buildings.Financial curbs on the army were blamed for the Tokyo coup, and Chinese government circles were filled with fears that new Japanese expansionist moves on the continent would be one result.Premier Keisuke Okada was shot down when his home was seized, and Finance Minister Viscount Korekiyo
Takahashi, who cut down army expenditures, and Admiral Viscount Makato Saito, ex-premier, were also officially stated to be dead.Machine guns were used to mow down the victims, reliable word from Tokyo said.Admiral Mineo Osuni, it was unofficially reported, has been asked by the Emperor to form a new cabinet.Emperor Hirohito, who called out his own imperial troops to crush the rebellion, was safe, and the mutineers declared their action was not directed against him.But other cabinet ministers, great industrial leaders, and statesmen were said either to have been slain or made captive in their homes and offices.Martial law, underground news lines said, was in effect all over Japan. It was possible to send messages into Japan, but not one direct telegram
about the coup was received in China.
Attempts to telephone to Tokyo met with word from the Japanese central station that "power was off."Following by less than a week news that the semi-liberal government of Premier Okada, which had refused to countenance more money for army drives on the continent, had been returned to power in the elections for the Diet, the rebellion was engineered by young officers who demanded more resolute action in China and against Russia, it was understood.Three thousand soldiers of the Third
Infantry Regiment of the First Army Division, stationed up to today in Tokyo, staged the daring revolt under the leadership of one Captain Nonaka,
when they were ordered to Manchuria for service on the Russian border.The Regiment was actually on its way to the station to entrain for Man-chukuo at dawn when the troops broke loose and rushed to strategic points in the heart of the metropolitan, the reports indicated.Without meeting with any serious resistance at first, they seized the War Office, the Home Office, Police Headquarters, the Ministry of Justice, and Ministry of the Interior.Other of Japan's famous men reportedly killed were Baron Consuke Hayashi, privy councillor and former ambassador to Great Britain; Seihin Ikeda, head of the gigantic Mitsui industrial and banking interests, who is one of Japan's richest men; and the Tokyo metropolitan police commissioner.Fumio Goto, minister of the interior, per cent between 1930 and 1935. Of the

as compared with 8064 in 1930.Mules and colts in 1935 numbered 411, a slight increase.Cattle numbered 30,788 as compared with 24,132 in 1930.There were 35,150 acres of corn for all purposes, producing 1,226,873
bushels.Wheat on 24,113 acres produced 511,196 bushels.Oats on 16,438 acres threshed 489, 406 bushels.Barley threshed 29,203 bushels, rye
1952 bushels; mixed grain, 5894

ANOTHER INSPIRING SUPREME COURT DECISION

(New York American, February 19, 1936)

Once more the Supreme Court of the United States has vindicated the nation's trust and confidence in it.Calmly, speaking with clarity and fearlessness, it has again
pointed the way of SANITY AND GOOD CONSCIENCE to our distracted Administration.The Court holds that the Wilson Dam, authorized by the National Defense Act of 1916, was constructed, as well as the power plant connected with it, in the exercise by Congress of its war and commerce powers for the purposes of national defense and the improvement of navigation.The Court has further held that the power generated at this point is incidental to the main purpose of the project and can therefore be sold and disposed of by the Government as is other property of the United States.Undoubtedly, the SALE OF POWER generated by the Government on this and similar projects is not only a proper function of the Government, but it is in the PUBLIC INTEREST.

Accompanying the decision is a warning that the Court expresses no opinion as to the validity of any other dam or power development in the Tennessee Valley, whether connected with the Wilson Dam or apart from it; nor does it express an opinion as to the validity of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act, or the program of the Authority, apart from the specific questions decided as above.The first effect of the decision will be to confirm the VAST POPULAR RESPECT FOR THE COURT, which has obviously been straight to the line of its judicial duty, and proceeded with flawless logic to uphold powers which are incidental to the exercise of an undeniable constitutional power.

There is a striking contrast between the limited scope of the decision and the flamboyant announcements at the time of the passage of the Tennessee Valley Authority Act.Little was then said about the improvement of navigation on the Tennessee River.We were told the Administration was embarking on "a far-reaching policy of land utilization and of population distribution"; a vast scheme of town building, road building, the decentralization of the manufacturing industry, the production of electricity and the sale of current to towns and farm cooperative groups; of fertilizer production, nitrogen plants, demonstration farms, laboratories, irrigation, drainage, and, in short, to quote from the President's message to Congress on April 10, 1933:"This power development leads logically to NATIONAL PLANNING. . . . It touches and gives life to ALL FORMS OF HUMAN CONCERN."

The broad question of the constitutionality of the TVA as formulated by the New Deal is still undecided.Even property belonging to the United States can only be disposed of, as Chief Justice Hughes reminds us, in a way which accords with the nature of the property.The method, he adds, "must be one adopted in the public interest, as distinguished from private or personal ends, and it

RESIDE IN QUAKERTOWNFive Women, Two Men Are

Score Years and Ten

OLDEST WOMAN IS 96

QUAKERTOWN, Feb. 26.—That seven residents of this borough have passed the 90 year mark has been brought out by a survey made by a local newspaper. The number of nonegenarians includes five women and two men.The honor of being the oldest goes to Mrs. Mary Blee who resides at the William Dietz home, 731 Juniper street. Mrs. Blee will celebrate her 96th birthday on Friday, February 28.
She is in good health, and when weather permits, enjoys walks in the neighborhood. Although her sight does not permit her to read anymore, she is keenly interested in the news of the day and enjoys the radio. Another keen delight is the entertaining of her friends and relatives, especially her great-grandchildren.Mrs. Amelia Jones, who was 94 years old on January 21, resides at 352 Franklin street, her sole companion being her dog, "Nellie." Mrs.
Jones, known to her neighbors as "Grannie Jones," does her own cooking and housecleaning. Carrying out the ashes even on these Wintry days
is no hardship for her. Mrs. Jones wears glasses only when she reads.
She is the daughter of the late Rev.
Jesias Roeller, one of the early pastors of Tobieck Lutheran Church.
Mrs. Jones is the mother of Mrs. Rein-hart, South Second street.Mrs. Amanda Mininger, 728 West Broad street, celebrated her 95th birthday on October 10. She enjoys good health, is active, and goes to church and visiting when the weather is favorable. Mrs. Mininger advances no theory for long life, but says: "I'm a product of the country, made of the old stuff. I've always been a hard worker, starting on the farm when I was a girl and working as hard as a man. I married, and raised six children. My husband, Louis, were he alive today, would have been 100 years old on February 9."Mrs. Lydia Romig, who was 92 years old on January 22, is the mother of
E. J. Romig and Augustus Romig.
She resides with the latter at 652 East Broad street. Miss Romig is hale and hearty, and most cheerful, despite the physical handicap of having been blind for the past twenty years.Henry S. Mumbauer was 91 years of age on June 30. He resides with his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs.
William Focht, 813 Juniper street.
Howard Mumbauer, one of Quaker-town's few Spanish-American War veterans, is also a son. Mr. Mumbauer is a native of near Spinnerstown, where years ago he engaged in farming. He enjoys excellent health, reads, and goes out walking almost every day.Mrs. Susanna E. Cope, who celebrated her 91st birthday on November 10, resides with her daughter, Mrs.
Lizzie Schorch, 217 Franklin street.
Mrs. Cope enjoys good health, is fairly spry, but the Wintry weather keeps her indoors. She is active about the house, helps with the dishes but cannot read because of failing sight.Edwin Keiper, 225 Juniper street, will celebrate his 91st birthday on March 3. Although he has been enjoying exceptionally good health, he has been confined to his home this Winter.
Mr. Keiper is a great advocate of walking for pleasure and exercise. In fact, when a 76-year-old man walked from Finland to Quakertown two years ago "Ed" thought that no feat
at all, and promised to show the people how a 90-year-old could do it. Accordingly on November 7, 1934, he walked from Allentown to Quaker-town, a distance of 16 miles in six hours and 17 minutes. He said: "With a few hours rest I could do it over again.""Life Insurance" Is To

Thaw Gradual During Past Few Days; Ice Locally
Is Still "Tight"Although ice conditions in the upper Delaware River are described as the worst in years, little fear is felt from any serious damage by the Delaware waters here.At the Bristol water works, Radcliffe street, this morning, it was stated that at present the water locally is only 19 to 12 inches above normal, and the rise has been gradual during the thaw of the past three days.There are no signs here of the ice breaking, those who are watching the river closely, claiming it is "tight" from Bristol to the opposite shore.The ice condition in the upper Delaware is proving a greater menace than at any time in the past 60 years. A tour of inspection made by the Dela-

other extending from the Delaware Water Gap to the headwaters of the river in New York State, and in that area life and property are said to be at stake when the "break-up" occurs.Water front patrols, are keeping close watch, night and day, on all of

MEANS WHAT IT SAYS

"Congress shall make no law . . . abridging the freedom of speech or of the press."

The supreme court of the United States has decided that this guarantee, in Article I of the Bill of Rights appended to our Constitution, still means what it says. That decision was made when the court declared unconstitutional the Louisiana law taxing newspaper and other advertising.

That law was passed not by congress but by the late Senator Huey Long's hand-picked Louisiana legislature. How then can the supreme court cite this limitation on congressional power as also binding on the Louisiana legislature?

Well, Justice Sutherland, who delivered the opinion, in which his eight colleagues unanimously concurred, cited another amendment to the Constitution, the fourteenth, which reads in part:

"No state shall make or enforce any law which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States, nor shall any state deprive any person of life, liberty or property without due process of law."

The Louisiana statute abridged "the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States" because it abridged the freedom of the press, Justice Sutherland ruled. He added that, if held valid and increased to a high degree, this tax "well might result in destroying both advertising and circulation." It tended, therefore, to deprive publishers of property without due process of law.

Justice Sutherland saw considerably more than a menace to publishers' pocketbooks in this law. The tax, he held, "is bad, not because it takes money from the pockets of the appellees. . . . It is bad because in the light of its history and of its present setting, it is seen to be a deliberate and calculated device in the guise of a tax to limit the circulation of information to which the public is entitled in virtue of the constitutional guarantee."

In other words, the Louisiana tax really was designed as a punitive measure to discipline newspapers hostile to the Louisiana state regime. As such, the law was a greater offense against the public than it was against the publisher; because, as Justice Sutherland pointed out:

"The newspapers, magazines and other journals of the country, it is safe to say, have shed and continue to shed more light on the public and business affairs of the nation than any other instrumentality of publicity; and since informed public opinion is the most potent of all restraints upon misgovernment, the suppression or abridgement of the publicity afforded by a free press cannot be regarded otherwise than with grave concern."

Even the most captious of self-styled "liberal" critics of supreme court exercise of its authority probably will not quarrel with this manifestation of what it pleases them to call "judicial usurpation." At least, they will not quarrel with the "freedom of the press" part of the decision. The "due process of law" part may irk some pseudo-liberal advocates of government control of private business through punitive taxation. But the average citizen will read Justice Sutherland's opinion as a double-barrelled shot in freedom's cause.

THE DECISION NOW HANDED DOWN IS A SOUND AND IMPRESSIVE ONE, BY A COURT WHICH IS TRUE TO THE SOLEMN RESPONSIBILITIES THAT HAVE BEEN INTRUSTED TO IT.

Among its good effects—and not the least—should be the humbling and silencing of ignorant demagogues in both houses of Congress, who have so outraged decency and truth by their cheap diatribes against the Court.

It is indeed the SUPREME Court of the nation, the constitutional mouthpiece of the people,—and held by them in a veneration and respect, WHICH THEY FEEL FOR NO OTHER BRANCH OR OFFICIAL OF THE GOVERNMENT!

"DAUGHTERS OF VENUS"

by ROBERT TERRY SHANNON

SYNOPSIS

Madame Hubert, well known beauty expert, makes Juliet Rankin manager of her institute, believing the young girl's pulchritude will prove an asset and offset her own ugliness. Tom O'Hara, former manager of the Hubert institute, objects to Juliet at first but he soon succumbs to her charm. Juliet is greatly attracted to O'Hara because of his resemblance to her dead sweetheart. Mrs. Gottlieb, a patient who had undergone a facial operation to hold her faithless husband's love, is expected to die because of her weak heart. The reputation of the institute is at stake. Hearing Mrs. Gottlieb call for her husband, Juliet summons him. At the sight of him, Mrs. Gottlieb rallies and Madame Hubert is deeply grateful to Juliet. Dr. Von Guerdon, the beauty specialist, expresses his love for Juliet. . . . She is now inspecting the institute.

CHAPTER VII

"Just a minute, please—I must get this grease off before I can shake hands."

Gerald McSpadden, in charge of cosmetic manufacturing, deep in the basement, smiled apologetically as he rubbed his hands with a towel.

He had been, when Juliet entered his glistening laboratory, mixing an experimental mass of some scented substance that looked like thick cream. His face had a basement look, and he viewed the world with slightly squinting eyes as though dreading what he might see.

Before he would shake hands with Juliet he insisted upon getting into one of those atrociously fitting coats that clothiers sell only to married men in the care-worn thirties. His whole appearance was somewhat rumpled, but enlivened, nevertheless, by a small blue flower in his buttonhole, which said to the world that Gerald McSpadden could dream of better things in life than wasting his years for a pittance in basement chemistry.

He made a half-bow, extended his hand and said in a little, shy voice, "Mr. O'Hara has spoken to me about you in—in the highest terms, Miss Rankin."

Juliet instantly was delighted with his meticulous manners, plus appealing bashfulness, plus the pathetic but somehow brave flower on the lapel.

"And Mr. O'Hara told me," lied Juliet enthusiastically, "that you were a marvelous chemist."

Sudden delight brightened McSpadden's eyes and he blinked rapidly with excitement.

"Did Mr. O'Hara actually say that?" he cried like a pleased child. "I've often wondered whether they liked my work or not—one never knows, does one?"

"How long," asked Juliet curiously, "have you been down here in the bowels of the earth—without knowing whether they liked your work or not?"

"Oh, in excess of five years," McSpadden told her. "But I can't complain as long as I get my paycheck, can I? And I'm not complaining. Miss Rankin—please understand that. No, indeed! The work's really fascinating—but I'm afraid it would sound awfully technical if I tried to explain it to you. I once attempted to tell Madame Hubert about it—technically that is—but she seemed strangely confused and indifferent."

"Do you mean to tell me," asked Juliet, "that Madame Hubert doesn't know what is in these preparations that bear her name?"

"I'm afraid not," admitted McSpadden.

"Nor Mr. O'Hara?"

"I'm sure Mr. O'Hara hasn't the slightest idea," confided McSpadden. "As a matter of fact, I myself am the only one who knows their exact composition. You see, this is my department."

"But do you understand the effect of all these lotions on the various types of skins?" asked Juliet, her amazement increasing. "Do you use guinea pigs in your experiments, or do you try the stuff out on human females?"

McSpadden flushed slightly. "Oh, not guinea pigs, they wouldn't be suitable at all. Unfortunately—and I regret to say this—I've never applied the preparations to the human epidermis. It's all largely theoretical, you know."

This conversation left a swimming sensation in Juliet's brain. McSpadden, too, was as dazed as Madame Hubert and O'Hara. The whole institute was a gorgeous padded-cell upholstered in brocades and perfumes. Was the entire thing a palatial hoax built on sands? Yet the beautiful gleaming building was real and substantial enough and so, no doubt, were Madame Hubert's bank accounts and cars and diamonds dog-collars. Somewhere in this was an element of reality—probably the faith of women by the thousands who paid golden tribute to the shrine of Venus, Goddess of Beauty.

"Of course our cosmetics are highly meritorious," McSpadden reman of magnetism and important achievements equal in the eyes of this celestial creature to those rich and carelessly poised super-men of the upper realm, typified by Von Guerdon and O'Hara. He yearned to say something brilliant and dashing and worthy of this new self, but he couldn't find the words.

"Don't bother Mr. O'Hara, please, about my salary," he said lamely. "It's quite sufficient. You see, he's such a busy man and so many people make demands on him. Everybody here—men and women alike—thinks he's wonderful. I don't suppose there's a manicurist or hairdresser in the place who isn't in love with him."

"How does he feel about them?" Juliet asked innocently.

"That I couldn't say," responded

"Do you mean to tell me," asked Juliet, "that Madame Hubert doesn't know what is in these preparations which bear her name?"

minded Juliet. "The success of the business proves it. Nothing so tremendous could be built on nostrums, could it?"

"Oh, absolutely not!" said Juliet, hastening to agree with this earnest little man. "But I'm afraid I haven't the brain to understand all your ferocious formulas and what not. Mr. McSpadden, chemists are probably born and not made. I'm sure our products are harmless to man or beast and, probably, the equal of anything on the market."

This unprecedented praise warmed McSpadden like sunlight and his skimpy ego expanded until his face flushed and colored and beamed as though the millennium had arrived. He started to speak and something choked in his throat.

"I—I don't know how to thank you, Miss Rankin, for this appreciation," he stammered.

"And furthermore," said Juliet, with a rush of new-found loyalty, "I'm going to tell Mr. O'Hara that we are doing marvelously down here, and see if I can't get your salary raised. I'm sure you make things hard for me to thank you."

In all his drab life McSpadden had never dared dream that a creature so radiantly lovely as Juliet would look upon him with such approval and understanding. Affection even glinted in those wonderful eyes. He forgot for the moment that he was ugly and awkward and that women passed him by on the street, who never a glance, and that he was an instant McSpadden.

McSpadden. "You see Mr. O'Hara has never taken me into his confidence."

The thought of a hundred trim and slim young girls with their burnished hair and silk-stockinged legs, and ripe lips concentrating their unrestrained desire upon the blue-eyed and black haired O'Hara, swept over Juliet like a repellant tide, leaving her vaguely disappointed in the heart.

All at once—utterly without reason—she was assailed by an imperative urge to rush back to where O'Hara was. It was a thoroughly secret impulse, but it was sensed by McSpadden. Men, too, have their intuitions and his eye lost its sparkle.

"I'll be going now," Juliet said in a hurried voice. McSpadden walked with her to the door, opened it and let her out. The blue flower in his lapel, when he glanced down at it, was wilted. Upstairs Juliet found a note from Madame Hubert on her desk.

"Instead of paying rent at the Ambassador, you may occupy Recovery Suite A on the top floor until you get a place of your own," it read. "The janitor will show you. Regards, H."

A mad, marvelous employer! Juliet inspected the recovery suite and found it was an elaborately appointed apartment used occasionally by wealthy patrons after severe treatments.

"The Madame is a thoughtful old dear, after all," Juliet decided.

Only One Low Priced Car
is FIRST in Everything That Counts

...TERRAPLANE

JUST COMPARE

THIS with THIS

Terraplane alone among all popular low priced cars gives you this:

- Full 115-inch wheelbase.
- 195 inches over-all length.
- Most power—88 or 100 horsepower—with freedom from vibration at all speeds.
- Body all of steel, with seamless roof of solid steel.
- Most inside room—145 cubic feet—more leg and shoulder room, and widest rear seat.
- Completely new style—best insurance of the investment value of your car.
- The only rear opening baggage and tire compartment on 5 and 6-passenger models that can be had in any low priced car without extra cost. Spare tire lies flat inside.
- Duo-Automatic Hydraulic Brakes (patent applied for), two braking systems operating automatically from one brake pedal. And a third braking system from the easiest operating parking brake in the world.
- Extra deep "V-type" windshield—for added beauty and wider vision.

In every other popular low priced car this is what you get:

- 2 to 6 inches less wheelbase.
- 5 to 12½ inches less over-all length.
- 3 to 18 less horsepower than Terraplane's 88—and not nearly as smooth.
- Body only partly of steel—or steel body with "soft-top."
- Less inside room—less shoulder and leg room—narrower rear seats.
- 1935 styling, changed only in details. Far more likely to be out of date by 1937.
- No rear opening baggage and tire compartment, except in cars where trunk models are available—at considerable extra cost. Spare tire mounted outside on all other models.
- Single main braking system—either hydraulic or mechanical—without complete reserve braking system and without Terraplane's type of easy acting parking brakes.
- Nothing like Terraplane's deep "V-type" windshield in any other low priced car.

The list of Terraplane advantages doesn't stop with those listed here. There's greater ruggedness, proved by owner mileages of 125,000, 150,000 and more. Greater economy, too, certified by thousands of sworn owner statements . . . emphasized again just the other day in the Los Angeles-Yosemite Economy Run when a Terraplane averaged 23.95 officially certified miles per gallon over a tough 352 mile stretch on mountain roads.

And dozens of other features . . . all at a price down with the lowest for the model you want. Come in and see and drive a Terraplane.

ADD COLOR TO MEALS WITH FRESH SALADS. EXCELLENT ADVICE

By Rhadana A. Armstrong
(Home Economics Representative)

Don't forget your salads these winter days. This is an excellent way to supply your family daily with a raw vegetable or fruit. Salads stimulate jaded appetites, give roughage, iron, phosphorus, vitamins B and C, and may be a very colorful part of the meal.

A good salad should be clean, cold, crisp and dry. Cold water will clean the guest for a lengthy time of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Ennis, Buckley street.

are placed in an open window for 15 minutes. Except when marinating salads, use salad dressing sparingly and do not add until just before the salad is to be served. In marinating the salad is mixed thoroughly in a French dressing until each piece is well coated.

Cabbage, carrots, celery and onions, if stored in the Fall, are now available to use for many raw salads. Below are a few interesting combinations for cabbage and carrots.

Shred cabbage and combine with any of the following:

- 1—Onion rings
- 2—Nuts and cheese
- 3—Raw turnips and celery
- 4—Ground raw beets, horseradish and sweetened vinegar
- 5—Sweet cream, diluted vinegar and sugar (slaw)
- 6—Stewed prunes, honey, and stewed apricots

Carrots combine nicely with:

- 1—Raisins and nuts
- 2—Celery and sweet pickles
- 3—Onions and celery

Apples are good in all combinations and are perhaps the cheapest of raw fruits for winter salads. Oranges, grapefruit and bananas make good salads when their price is reasonable. Dried fruits are usually economical. Prunes, raisins, and apricot salad "pep up" many a dull meal.

Canned vegetables and fruits may be used effectively and are very convenient in preparing winter salads.

Most raw and canned vegetables and fruits may be made into gelatin salads. Fresh pineapple is the one exception. These salads give variety and color.

A well selected, carefully prepared, and correctly served salad will do more toward lifting a mediocre meal out of the ordinary color than any other item on the menu.

Regular use of the Courier Classified column is economical and profitable.

COUNTY FEDERATION OF SPORTSMEN ASSEMBLE

The Bucks County Federation of Sportsmen's Clubs met in the federation's club rooms at Doylestown, Monday night. Election of officers for 1936 took place with the following results: President, Charles Roe; vice president, Dr. Van Buren; secretary, Edward Balderson; treasurer, Allan Grant.

Charles Roe, Doylestown, was part of the Bucks County delegation, which journeyed to Washington during the national conference of sportsmen from the United States, Canada and Mexico. He gave a very interesting description of the conference which impressed everyone present. Dr. Crotnick, Morrisville, gave a report on the conference. His main report consisted of a project whereby the farmer would become the game keeper and in return would receive compensation for each man hunting on his property. It was also brought out by Charles Roe that at the Pennsylvania Federation Meeting in Harrisburg, a motion was carried to increase the present fishing license from $1.50 to $2, the additional 50 cents to be used to provide more public waters for the fisherman in addition to more extensive stocking.

A discussion was held on the acquisition of further public hunting grounds within Bucks County. At the present time there are about 1500 acres of public hunting ground just above Doylestown.

Warren Fretz gave a talk concerning the damage that dogs have already done, and urged that the sportsman co-operate if the wild life is to survive during the winter months. "A dog can easily out-run a deer on crusted snow because the deer's feet break through the crust. To date dogs in the upper section of Bucks County have claimed 10 deer. The amount of small game is hard to estimate but the toll is high. A plan has been put into motion to provide 120 special deputy game wardens, in addition to the regular staff for 1936. These men will all be schooled and supplied with badges.

A discussion followed on a possible method by which the sportsmen could acquire more hunting grounds in the small game area and the following committee was asked to present a resolution at the next meeting: Dr. Crotnick, Morrisville, chairman; Dr. VanBuren, Perkasie; C. Ronald Swain, Edgely; Allan Grant, Quakertown; Edward Willard, Yardley.

The Edgely Rod and Gun Club was represented by Samuel Helling, Ronald Swain and Joseph Haines.

FALLS HIGH WINS OVER YARDLEY ON COURT HERE

Whitely Johnson, diminutive forward of Joe Doheny's Orange and Black Fallington quintet, made his two fouls count in the final period of the latter's game with Yardley high last evening on Bristol's court, and was instrumental in downing the Yardley five for their tenth consecutive loss in the Lower Bucks County League. The final score was Fallington 14, Yardley 13.

Yardley started off with a bang and led the Falls club, captained by Bill Lovett, blonde star, all the way in the first half. The count at half time read 6-5 in favor of the cellar dwellers of the circuit.

Falls came back fighting in the second half, however, and with Johnson and Briegle hitting the cords, pulled through with a 14-13 verdict.

Al Breigle and Whitely Johnson led the winners with five points and four tallies, respectively, while Tommy Parks with three goals from scrum-mage was high man for Yardley.

BRISTOL HIGH CLICKS FOR WIN OVER OSTEOPATH

Bristol high clicked again last night! And so the Bunnies chalked up their 13th win of the year in 15 starts and successfully finished their scheduled campaign on the home floor. Osteopathy's Freshmen were the victims last night and the final count read 29-25.

The Cardinal and Gray looked very impressive in their triumph and showed a complete reversal of last Friday's game when they made such a dismal showing in the second half of their fray with Morrisville's Blue and Gold.

Last evening the localities were trailing, 12-10, at half time but played fine basketball in the second half to ring up point after point to chalk up a well-earned victory. As late as the third period the Bunnies trailed, 21-19, but a barrage of field goals by Punk Zefferi erased this margin and the Dougherty-coached lads went to the fore, never to be headed.

The game was a rough and tumble one. Twenty-eight fouls were committed during the 32 minutes of milking. Thirteen times the homesters were the offenders, while the visiting bone-benders were charged with 15 infractions. The former lost Buck Profy, while the visiting club was forced to do without Hal Sulatis, as these two players were eliminated by the personal foul route.

Osteopathy held an 8-4 advantage at the end of the first period. The Bunnies brought the count to 12-10 at the end of the half. By the time the third period was completed the localities trailed by 21-19 while a last-period spurt by Lower Bucks County League leaders brought them victory.

Punk Zefferi again tallied the highest for the homesters although his ten points were closely followed by six tallies by Phil Carnvale, who really played a great brand of basketball; Charlie Hughes and Nick Hufnell.

Bill Hupka, rangy visiting pivot man, was high for Osteopathy with four field goals and one conversion, while the forwards Ulrich and Tomei had four points to their credit.

On Friday night the locals visit Burlington High in an effort to erase last year's defeat from the records.

RESERVED SEATS ON SALE FOR MONDAY'S BOUTS

Reserved seats for the amateur boxing show to be conducted in the Italian Mutual Aid Hall, Monday night, by the St. Ann's Athletic Association, will go on sale today. Fans are requested to order their tickets early because so many were disappointed at the last fights because they could not get choice seats.

Match-Maker Patsy Moffo is already working hard on a card to entertain the Bristol folks. He again will attempt to fix up a card which will see ten youths of Bristol and nearby vicinity pitted against some of the best in Philadelphia. In a few days, Moffo is expected to have his card complete.

One of the youngsters who is training diligently and expects to perform Monday night is "Lenny" Dever, the Spruce street flash. Dever has joined the colors of the St. Ann's boxing team and will make his first appearance as an Eastern A. A. U. mittman. Dever fought in the boxing shows sponsored by the St. Ann's organization before its connection with the A. A. U.

Reserved seats can be had by phoning 9934.

EMIL DUSEK TO MEET BLUE MASK AT TRENTON

TRENTON, Feb. 26—Emil Dusek, ace Arena badman, will make his first eastern stand in almost a year when he clashes with the Blue Mask, mysterious hooded grappler, in the feature match at the Trenton Arena tonight. They tangle over the best two fall out of three route, 90-minute time limit and one of the hottest bouts is anticipated when these two rough behemoths climb onto the canvas.

The added incentive for victory is that the winner will face Yvon Robert, sensational young French-Canadian next week.

Emil Dusek has appeared in many wild and spectacular combats at the Arena and confirmed wrestling fans know that when he is in the ring there is action galore. He faces one of the toughest hombres to flash across the local grappling horizon in the Blue Mask, who has mowed down all the opposition he has faced and last week downed the very popular Vic Christy.

was either assassinated or a prisoner in his home, it was reported.

General Jotaro Watanabe, inspector-general of military education, was seriously wounded while resisting an attack by the insurrectionists.

Two high imperial officers, Count Makimo and General Suzuki, escaped when attempts were made on their lives.

Fate of War Minister Yoshiyuki Hawashima is unknown. Prince Sai-onji, last member of the Genro, or elder statesmen, closest advisor of Emperor Hirohito, is understood to be safe.

The troops of the revolting regiment were well-armed, having just been supplied with ammunition for the Manchurian assignment, in place of the blank cartridges they used in Tokyo.

Besides the defeat of Fascists and militarists in the Diet elections, the coup was partially ascribed in Japanese circles here to the troops' resentment against summoning General Mazaki, former head of the Army Education Bureau, as a witness at the trial of Col. Aizawa. Aizawa is now on trial for murdering the chief of the Army General Staff, General Nagata.

General Mazaki had strong influence over younger officers, who opposed his testifying at the trial of a strong-arm proponent.

High School Athletes Should Be Physically Fit

ALLENTOWN, Feb. 26—Permitting high school athletes to participate in sports without proper physical examination is a crime, said Arnold F. Link, director of health and physical education in Lancaster public schools, as he spoke before the 44th annual meeting of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society here today.

"To allow students who participate in interschool and intramural athletic programs without definitely knowing whether they have heart or lungs to stand the strain is nothing but a crime," he declared.

Link presented the "view-points" in a symposium of the school authorities in tuberculosis control.

Intimating that improperly supervised athletics often cause tuberculosis, Link said: "Teachers who in this case may be the coach, should demand a complete and thorough medical examination for their players. Permission granted to some students to represent the school without an examination cannot be known by any other name than exploitation."

Do you know there is a demand for stoves of all descriptions? Advertise the one you don't need, in the Courier.

MORRISVILLE, Feb. 26—Tickets are all disposed of for the banquet to be given to the Morrisville high school football eleven in the school cafeteria Thursday night at 6.15 o'clock. The Morrisville Rotary Club will join in this banquet and have their meeting at the same time.

The speakers, Harvey J. Harman, head coach of the University of Pennsylvania; and Charles W. Mayser, head of athletics at Franklin & Marshall College, have been procured for this dinner by the Rotary Club. The dinner will be served by members of the Parent-Teacher Association.
